Mrs. Muhasey was formerly Miss Desdin Badinger. We wish them success. This is the first time the home has been conveyed since Voltaire Lobl purchased it from John Sprague, March 8, 1852. On the same day, namely Monday, Mrs. Katherine Breidenbach vacated her farm across the road and gave possession to John E. Jacobs, the new owner, with D. McGinnis as tenant. This homestead was owned by the family of John J. Vonrueden to the present owner, since November, 1851. The first owner of the family line was the father of Mrs. Frances Rockteacher, who is living in the village and is 92 years of age. Thus have the names of Breidenbach and Lobl passed by conveyance to other hands. The pioneers are gone to the great beyond.

AUSTRIA'S ELITE SEEK MARINE JOBS

(By Associated Press.)
Galveston, Tex.—Thousands of Austrian mariners are complaining under the terms of the treaty of Versailles from sailing under their own flags.

They are seeking employment in the United States merchant marine, according to Capt. O. J. Christensen, in charge of the Shipping Board's sea service bureau here.

The captain received a letter from the Austrian consul-general at Hamburg, stating that the plight of the Austrian seamen is deplorable.

The men seeking employment in this country, the letter states, are mariners heart and soul, but owing to the fact that their country no longer possesses access to the sea never can hope to again practice their beloved profession under the flag of their own country.

Hundreds of the applicants for positions, according to the consul-general, are of the upper stratum of society, speak several foreign languages and are otherwise qualified to hold responsible positions in the merchant marine.

"For thirty years I have suffered all the misery that goes with stomach trouble, rheumatism, and disordered kidneys, and when I began taking Tanlac I was so bad off I was about to retire from business."

"My stomach was so badly upset that it nearly laid me up altogether and after every meal I took cramping spells that sometimes were so bad I couldn't leave the house for fear I would not get back. I bloated up so with gas that I could not get a long breath. My legs pained me almost every minute of the day and when the weather was damp my arms hurt me so much it was agony for me to bend them. My kidneys were so badly out of order that I had pains all through my back and at night I was in such misery I could hardly sleep at all. Every morning my back was so stiff it was hard for me to get out of bed and during the day I couldn't think of doing my work."

"Things are different now as Tanlac has made a wonderful change in my condition. Everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. The rheumatism has almost disappeared and the pains and stiffness in my back have all gone. I sleep sound every night and I get up in the mornings feeling fine and ready for breakfast. I have given up all idea of retiring from business, as Tanlac has given me new life and strength and I am now enjoying better health than I have for many years."

Tanlac is sold in Janesville by all leading druggists.

MELROSE EXPLAINS CHURCH MOVEMENT

An address on the inter-church world movement was given by Rev. Melrose at the morning service at the Federated church yesterday. He said the movement had come out of the war from the pressure of circumstances and due to the fact that the church has come to face new issues.

The church has received a new vision of the way things are and the way they ought to be. It believes all Christian forces should get together to stem the tide of unbelief, social, industrial and religious, which seems about to engulf the world.

He outlined several points which are to be emphasized in this movement. First, the spiritual resources of the church, which should endeavor to bring religion close to life; second, missionary information relating to the world with its doors open to receive the gospel; third, the life work challenge of today as it comes to the young people; and fourth, the partnership of stewardship, which should bring home the thought of all possessions being accepted under God.

"The church stands today before its ideals," he said, "and the need is so immense it must arise to the occasion to be able to attempt what is to be done."

In the anthem by the choir, Miss Margaret McCulloch sang the solo part. Fred Schoof and C. J. Smith sang a duet.

AUTO LIGHT ORDERS
GO INTO EFFECT MAY 1

Madison—Orders on automobile lights adopted by the industrial commission, will become effective May 1. Standards prescribed will apply to all automobiles, motor cycles and other similar motor vehicles, both while driven upon the highways and while parked.

The standards as prescribed will make impossible the use of diffusing types of lenses, but all other lenses will meet the requirements, if properly adjusted.

The standards also can be met without the purchase of any patent lenses, through proper adjustment and dimming. The commission will issue information upon how the standards may be met. Under standards adopted, adjustment is much more important than the type of lens, and the commission urges motorists who purchase lenses to secure guarantees that they are properly adjusted to meet the Wisconsin requirements.

The orders prescribe the minimum and maximum candle power permitted at 100 feet in front of the motor vehicle and seven feet to the right of the axle. They also prescribe the size of lamps which may be used. All headlights and other front lights may display a light of any color except red, while tail lights must show a red light in all cases.

The maximum permitted candle power is such that dangerous glare will be eliminated, while the minimum standard makes it certain that the motorist can distinguish a substantial object 200 feet in front of the car.

TEACHERS OF ART
AND MUSIC TALK

A delightful program relating to city schools was given at a meeting of the Philomathian club at the home of Mrs. Walter Helms, South Main street, Saturday.

Miss Edith Sturtevant, teacher of art, and Miss Florence Snyder, teacher of music, gave informal talks concerning their subjects. Miss Snyder gave a brief resume of the study of music, its influence on character, and the best way of using it in schools.

She favors the establishment of a national conservatory of music where the best pupils of music would be trained free of charge, and might be educated free of charge.

Miss Sturtevant advocated art as an expression of the child's individuality. She had examples of work done in school most of them simple things of which the pupil could make some practical use. Calendars, portfolios, writing books and other useful adjuncts to school life are made and designed by the children, and unknowingly they are taught spelling, lettering and other first principles of art.

Mrs. Stewart Richards sang "The Rosary" and a new ballad, "Smilin' Thru". At five o'clock in unison, the hosts served to twenty-one women, the hosts being assisted by Mrs. W. A. Munn and Mrs. H. D. Murdoch.

40-DAY REVIVAL
SERVICES BEGIN

An intensive campaign along religious lines in the Methodist church began yesterday with a meeting of group leaders and officials, immediately after the morning service. Unit leaders appointed are: Victor Bauer and Thomas Swallow; Elmer Townsend and David Heenan; E. G. Owen and C. E. Moore; Dr. F. T. Richard and Nelson Hinds; Alonzo Hubbard and Perry VanPool; E. P. Hocking and A. T. Mosher; W. J. Knighs and L. J. Robb; E. E. Van Pool and J. A. Steiner; George A. Jacobs and J. E. Lane; J. Barfoot and J. M. Becker.

After an informal luncheon hour spent at the church, unit leaders devoted the afternoon to making calls upon church members securing pledges from them of their attendance upon the revival meetings which are to be held the next six weeks.

Announcements for the meetings tonight follow: Children's night, led by Miss Aruby Grey; Tuesday, Sunday school night led by a chorus of officers and teachers of the school; Wednesday, Men's night, led by the men's chorus and E. E. VanPool; Thursday, Women's night, led by a women's chorus and Mrs. J. M. Edwards; Friday, Young People's night, led by young people's chorus and Miss Florence Snyder; Sunday, Everybody's night led by the young people's chorus and Miss Florence Snyder.

Two hundred signed the following pledge yesterday: "I hereby pledge to pray daily that souls may be won to Christ, and to attend the church meetings at least three times each week unless hindered by sickness or absence from the city." A placard large enough to be seen from the street was hung in the front window of every Methodist home. The placard bore these words: "This home supports the Methodist mission world wide convert campaign. Revival services Methodist church, every night except Saturday, from March 21 to May 2."

Interest ran high in the beauty contest which began this noon at high school with Margaret Bailey and Elizabeth Styles selling ballots. The name of the candidate who is leading in the contest was to be announced at the close of school this afternoon and again tomorrow afternoon. The contest closes Wednesday evening, the winner not to be known until the Phoenix is published. A ballot box has been placed in the upper hall.

Voice of the People

Editor, Gazette:

My attention has just been called to an editorial in the Gazette of March 3, 1920, in which you state "He had just been told that the Bell people had been obliged to borrow fifty million dollars at 7 1/2%." It should be 7 1/4%. You then call attention to the fact that the report of the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. shows a profit of sixty million in 1919. You then state that "The interest of truth, veracity, and the need for information by the people seems to demand that you call their immediate attention and that of the attorney of the Bell Company to these facts." The implication seems to be that we haven't stated the truth. This is a serious charge and is entitled to an answer published as conspicuously as the accusation.

Permit me to state that I held no brief for and never have represented the Bell System and have no other information regarding their affairs than is assessed by many other outsiders. I merely alluded to the fact that they had to pay a high rate of interest—borrowing a large sum of money just when they were in a position to say that their net profit was sixty million is not very apparent when one considers the interest and taxes of the Bell Company. The same statement to which you refer—shows that the stock, bonds, and notes of the Bell Telephone System is one billion six hundred million and seventy-nine million total income is about 7 1/2% on this. This statement does not show that the net assets devoted to earnings is one billion four hundred forty-eight million and seventy-nine million is only 5 1/2%.

The American Telegraph & Telephone Co. does not own the Janesville Bell plant. The latter is a portion of the Wisconsin Telephone Co., a subsidiary of the Bell System, and the Wisconsin Company must pay its own bills and the Railway Commission expects the Wisconsin Company to treat its Janesville plant as a unit with other plants of other places for the reason that it would thereby have an unfair advantage over the Rock County Telephone Co. If for instance the local Bell Company reduced its rates where it had competition and raised them where it had not, it would simply be playing the old Standard Oil game of freezing out competition, and one of the duties of the Railroad Commission is to prevent that very thing.

My argument was for the Rock County Telephone Co., a local company owned by local people which by very means must be paid for by the city. In fact, the telephone subscribers include a great majority of the families of our city and they can have any telephone convenient which they desire but, like anything else in this world which is good, they have to pay the cost and sustain the expense. It is not true to put capital into the enterprise.

Yours very truly,

M. P. Richardson, Attorney for Rock County Telephone Co.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND

By JANE BUNKER

Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Now, I had calculated this way—to pass him in the act of stopping on him and make him turn when he answered me so the light would fall on his face. I got the look at him I wanted and went out.

I walked half a block and turned sharply in my tracks. Mr. Man was about twenty feet in the rear, following me. I began to limp the more I saw he was following me.

I walked past my house to the end of the block. As I turned north, I saw Mr. Man ambling along in my direction. I stepped into a florist's and bought a fresh bunch of hyacinths. By the time I had them paid for, Mr. Man had reached the store and was looking in the window, pretending not to see me.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked sweetly.

"No—not very." He touched his hat and I thought he looked annoyed.

I sprinted along ahead of him and turned at One Hundred and Forty-fifth street. I fancy Mr. Man had no idea of sprinting himself on into a toy shop and was buying a doll for my niece when he discovered me. He pretended he didn't see me. He walked on ahead, but I caught up with him.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked.

"No—not very." He was beginning to look astonished now.

I sprinted away and turned south on Amsterdam. I went into a stationery store and bought an ink eraser. Mr. Man passed the door and glanced in. I motioned him to wait, but he pretended not to see me. I ran some distance ahead when I came out. I ran after him and caught up.

"Did I hurt you very much?" I asked.

"No—not very," he answered, giving himself too much concern over a little accident. He was, I saw, beginning to wonder which of us was following which!

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty

Oh, girls, such an abundance of thick, heavy, invigorated hair; a perfect mass of wavy, silky hair, gloriously fluffy, bright and so easy to manage.

Just moisten a cloth with a little "Danderine" and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this magically removes all dirt, excess oil and grease, but your hair is not left brittle, dry, stringy or faded, but charmingly soft, with glossy, golden, gleaming tender lights. The youthful glints, tints and color are again in your hair.

"Danderine" is a tonic-beautifier. Besides doubling the beauty of the hair at once, it checks dandruff and stops falling hair. Get delicate Danderine for a few cents at any drug or toilet counter and use it as a dressing and invigorator as told on bottle.

"No," said I quietly. "I'm not giving myself the least concern over your stepped-on toe—I'm simply using it as an excuse to get a good look at you in various lights so I'll know you again in any possible disguise you may assume."

I have always regarded that episode—and those last words—as a stroke of genius on my part. If I do say so! It came to me on the spur of the moment without thinking about it, and nearly bowled Mr. Man over. Before he had decided what to say, or what to do to allay my suspicion of him, I booted across the street, diagonally, between two trolley cars, one of which hid me from view long enough for me to get into the corner drug store where I dashed into the telephone booth and called up Mrs. Delario.

I had considerable difficulty in getting her and I felt every second was precious. My detective mind was looking about somewhere, looking for me, and I rather guessed she had one watching her. My suspicions seemed confirmed, for the moment she recognized my voice she said, "I can't talk to you," in a tragic, determined sort of way and I felt her in the act of hanging up.

"Wait!" I shouted, peremptorily. "Why can't you talk to me? Are you watched? Is everything you say overheard?"

"All right—then I'll do the talking. You can answer yes and no, can't you?"

"Well, we're both in the same boat—I'm watched too—followed by a detective. This is the first chance I've had to get you and I don't know how soon I'll be able to get you again. Is your house watched?"

"Yes."

"I run the blockade?"

"No." This was fairly shouted at me.

"Is there any way I could get these articles back to you today?"

"No—none whatever now. No, not under any consideration."

"Couldn't you come up and get them?"

"No—of course not."

"Couldn't you send up?"

"Whom could I send? Impossible—totally impossible." Her tone was so emphatic that I knew there was nothing to be hoped for in that quarter.

"I felt she was about to ring off and leave me with that and shouted to me: 'Here—hold on! I don't know what to do—you'll have to advise me.'"

"But I can't! You must do as you think best—you understand it."

"I don't! That's just the trouble. Listen, I'm sure you'll get me to know about it. You keep on answering yes and no—that isn't going to give anything away at your end, and I'm sure you and I don't think anything will get out from this end."

"You knew I was at your house yesterday?"

"Yes—after you had left."

"You knew I was accused? And that I denied everything?"

"I thought it happened that way—I wasn't sure."

"Were you accused, too?"

"Yes."

"Of the same thing?"

"I presume so."

"You denied everything?"

"Absolutely."

"Now I really must know this—did you bring those articles in your suit?"

"Yes."

"You said a friend did."

"Well—I didn't feel I could explain at the time. There were circumstances connected with it."

"At the time we crossed together—this last trip?"

"Yes. Can't you see how things have been worked? If I'd followed my intuitions, I shouldn't have allowed—"

"The girl to come with you?"

"Yes. It was planned."

"Wait! There's another thing I want to know."

"I'll tell you later."

"No—now. How did they get through the net?"

"But I must know—it's a matter of great importance to me."

"One of those slippers we bought in Paris is lost."

"No it isn't—I have it. Please answer my question—how?"

"Good-by."

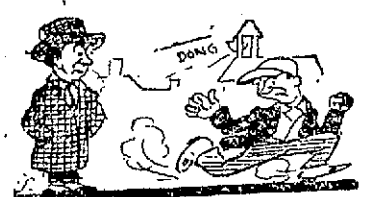

That was all. I couldn't get another word. She'd rung off. Just as I was trying to get her back, I saw Mr. Detective Man slip into the drug store. He saw me in the booth. Then he quickly slipped away again, I hung up and stepped out; but I looked back as I opened the street door—Mr. Detective Man was just sliding into the booth to find out what number I'd called!

Dinner Stories

An American tourist recently visited the ancient city of Chester and was startled by the loud clanging of the fire alarm bell.

Seeing others run, he ran, too, and presently found himself one of a crowd gathered to witness the departure of the fire engines. In a short time the engines dashed out of the yard and disappeared down the street in a whirl of dust and smoke.

With a view to gathering information, the tourist addressed himself to a man in the crowd.

"Say, mister, I suppose in an old place like this, containing so many timber-framed houses, you often have a fire?"

"Pretty often," assented the man. "How often, now, does a fire occur?" asked the American.

"Every time that bell rings," replied the man, nodding toward the bell tower.

The company had fallen out for a rest on its hike into the Argonne. Several negro workers dropped in the sun. A burly six-foot Numidian driving a big army mule have into sight on his way to the rear. The whip he carried a five-pound hammer.

"Hey, there, Sam, where you goin'?" called out one of the roadside loafers.

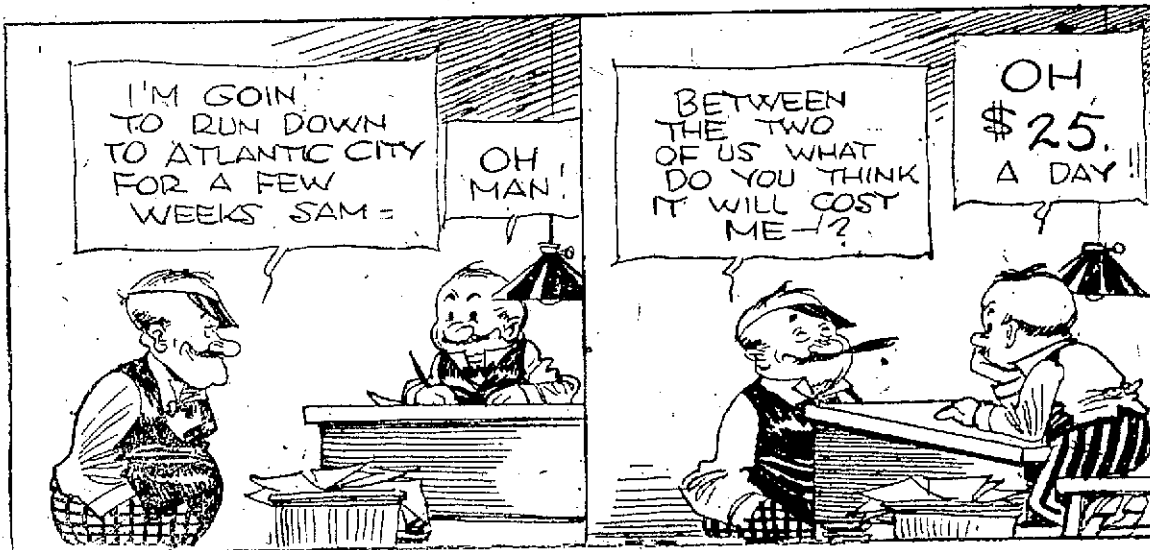

"I'm on my way to build me a bungalow on de Dixieburg line," retorted the other without a smile.

Just then a shell exploded a few yards from the road. The mule instantly turned tail and proceeded to break all records in getting back where he came from, his driver hanging on for dear life.

"Dat ing," muttered a darker. "Dat ain't no way to arrive at de Dixieburg line. Dat baby's done gone toward de Cunard Line."

Chicago—Eamon De Valera, "president of the Irish republic," declared his mission to the United States had been crowned with success. "Nothing remains but the formal act of recognition of your nation's chief executive," he said.

WHEN A MAN'S MARRIED

BILLY WHISKERS

A FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

"My, aren't they homely?" sneaked Billy, as he approached the hyenas' cage. "I would not like to meet one along after dark, but still I hear they are cowardly and wait until one is dead before they try to eat him up. I don't think I will make a long call, for their grin and laugh too much, and their laughter has no mirth in it. It is just a loud guffaw." So he only stayed a few minutes and then went on to a beautiful white llama's cage.

"Good morning, Miss Llama," said Billy very politely, for he wished to get in the good graces of the beautiful

Miss Llama whom he admired very much for her long, silky, white hair and mild, brown eyes.

"Good morning, Mr. Whiskers," she replied. "How do you and your

FORWARD, JANESVILLE!

To make Janesville a better place in which to live and in which to do business, the Gazette pledges itself to work for and support these things:

Housing survey to discourage exorbitant rentals; encouragement of building more houses; appraisal of property values so that rent profiteers may be made to pay the increased amount of taxes.

Open roads in the country 355 days of the year; better roads generally, and support of building plans, better streets and more paved streets in the city.

A market pavilion in the city which may also be used for many other purposes by farmers and livestock producers.

A community building to be used for auditorium, sport events, meetings, rest rooms, and also as a fitting memorial for soldiers.

Open the churches seven days a week and stop economic waste in room and time. Make basements meeting places for the young, and provide gymnasium facilities.

Build a real home for the girls who come here to work.

Open the fair grounds this year as a recreation park with tennis courts and other play apparatus. Establish parks and playgrounds.

Better the street car service as population increases.

BAD ROADS AND THE TOLL OF DEATH.

One of the Gazette correspondents writing about the roads stated that it was impossible to get a doctor to her home, owing to the condition of roads. Which is one of the things bad roads have done in the county of Rock and all other counties which have failed to keep the roads passable in winter as well as in summer. We have paid the price in deaths. Isolation has made it impossible to get medical attendance in many cases and the penalty has been extorted in human life. We would not like to assume the responsibility for so grave a situation were we in a position to have ordered roads kept open and been in command of the machinery for that purpose, and then failed. This has been the real tragedy of the winter and its impassable roads.

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE REPORT.

The keynote of the report of the industrial conference called by President Wilson, made public on Sunday, is the close cooperation of the employers and employees in the operation of the plants. It is a voluminous document occupying many newspaper columns. It accepts the principle of settlement of difficulties from the bottom and not the top, beginning with a regional adjustment board and the highest authority vested in a national industrial board. It proposes to have all disputes and disagreements settled by employer and employee representation and arbitration. It does not deny the right to strike and fosters the idea of collective bargaining. Employees are to be given a place in the management of the relations between the owners and the plant operation and the employees, by a system of employee representation.

Of the scope of the plan the report says: "The plan is national in scope and operation, yet it is decentralized. It is different from anything in operation elsewhere. It is based upon American experience and is designed to meet American conditions. It employs no legal authority except the right of inquiry. Its basic idea is stimulation to settlement of differences by the parties in conflict, and the enlistment of public opinion toward enforcing the method of settlement."

This plan is elaborately worked out and is the result of months of deliberation on the part of the conference headed by Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson. It is so far as can be judged by casual reading, the first real plan proposed in America, to bring into close relationship the employee and employer in management and operation of industry, and in detail works out a scheme for the settlement of all disputes without the great economic loss which have come by strikes and unrest.

This report is worth more than one reading. It has scores of points and subject matter which prevents its discussion in one brief review. Each of the topics will be taken up and presented to the public by the Gazette. It is the most vital thing of the present year and should not be permitted to die without action.

NO CONCESSION TO AMERICA.

At Paris, President Wilson was ever ready to make concessions. It asked by Lloyd George or Clemenceau or Orlando, or the Japanese representatives he eventually gave in. He has so admitted. He tossed the 14 points into the Seine, the first day. Self-determination was trampled under his feet. Open covenants openly arrived at became a rigid censorship for America. "I won't" became "I will, thank you." But when he came back to America with a treaty, the worst ever conceived by international diplomacy and impossible of carrying out, he lashed himself to the mast and refused to come down. He is still up there.

We want a treaty of peace. We want the state of war ended. We want in that treaty a little protection for America, some national penalties for nations failing to keep pledged words, and a moiety at least of Americanism. The treaty of Paris contains none of these. It is potent for war and rebellion, for massacre and retribution, for settlement of nothing except by the continued arbitrament of war and ending in governmental chaos.

"America is now isolated" cries the treaty supporter with stubborn failure to see beyond the viewpoint of Great Britain or France. It is quite likely there are a majority of Americans who are better satisfied to be thus "isolated" than that we should have armies in Turkey and Hungary, on the Balkan frontier and in Siberia policing the world. It is unbelievable that any body of men can ever be elected that will ratify the treaty of Versailles without making the league of nations covenant over into an American document.

REPUBLICAN OR SOCIALIST, WHICH?

When a man or a number of men become candidates for delegate on the republican ticket and enter the primaries to be voted for by republicans, it is not only implied but accepted as a fact that they are republicans and the very place they hold on the ticket makes it necessary in equity to support the ticket named at the convention.

But that is not the program of the La Follette delegates to the national convention should the catastrophe of their election on April 6th come to pass. That is so, comes from one of the candidates on the ticket, City Clerk Peter Leuch, of Milwaukee, who is on the La Follette ticket in the Fifth Congressional district. He has made the statement that if the candidates nominated by the party at the Chicago convention are not to the

SOMEBODY'S CHILDREN ARE ALWAYS NEAR.

Sombody's children are always near. Ready to romp all our cures away. Day little voices are ringing clear. Hearts and hands eager to share their play. None for an hour need childless be. Graybeards turn from your griefs awhile. Children are waiting for you and me To go with them to the land of smile.

Soldiers are marching to life and drum. Queens, whose crowns are of sun-kissed curls, Up to our lonely thresholds come, Willing to be our boys and girls. We, who cherish their laughter sweet, May turn if we will from our loneliness And hear the patter of little feet And borrow the touch of a child's caress.

Always the children are waiting near, Glad to welcome us out to play; Never need mother and father fear That they shall come to a childless day. Though the years grow lonely and sad and long, And out in the world must our babies go, There shall always be laughter and mirth and song, And trumpet and drum for us all to know.

And what if these babies are not our own, We may play with them and may love them, too, We may hear in their laughter the laughter flow, And claim the gladness that once we knew. Oh, whether we're old or whether we're sick, Or whether we've come to life's last short mile, We can borrow from somebody's girl or lad An hour of joy in the land of smile.

—Copyright 1920 by Edgar A. Guest.

Liking of the La Follette delegates, they will bolt and start a third party. It is quite likely that this very thing will happen, that a candidate of their liking will not be named. In the first place the delegation will be unable to carry out the half-socialist platform on which they are running in any but a socialist convention, and no republican convention would ever adopt such a platform.

The voters of Wisconsin have in no way indicated a preference as to candidates for the presidency. They are widely divided in their ideas as to which man now in the field or leading republicans not entered are best to head the ticket. Therefore they have the finest opportunity in the world to see that a delegation of men, without hampering instructions, is sent to the convention. And whoever is nominated by that convention at Chicago will not be bolted by the un instructed delegation either. Mr. Leuch should go farther and say which men in the field today would be unacceptable to his boss, and who, if nominated, they would bolt. That is the way to clear the atmosphere, and then let Mr. Thompson, the chief spokesman, tell the people these things. If Mr. Thompson and Mr. Ballard and Mr. Leuch wish to socialize the republican party it is time to know it now. The place for them is, however, not in the republican party, but shoulder to shoulder with Victor Berger.

Lady Astor made a speech in the House of Commons in which, supporting the British navy plans, she said the United States would be very stupid to try and build a navy against Great Britain, as "England owns the seas." That's the way the British used to talk before the war of 1912.

President Wilson does not know what to do with the treaty now that it is back on the White House doorstep. Let us suggest its burial in the same grave with the fourteen points.

"University Oulja Mad." is a newspaper headline referring to the U. of W. Maybe oulja told the professors about organizing a union.

Ready-Made Families

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director

Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C.

New York, March 22.—The adoption of children has become such a pastime in New York that it is almost threatening to exceed the supply. People must have acquired the adoption habit during the war, for the authorities think never before has there been such an amazing run on the orphan market. Not only are would-be foster parents required in all parts of the state, but requests for orphans are being received from points as remote as Alaska and Texas. In fact, New York appears recently to have become a regular clearing house for orphans and foundlings, the majority of whom are sent to residents of other sections of the country.

Competition Is Keen

If you set out to adopt an orphan these days with the pleasant idea that you are conferring a favor upon society in general and upon the orphan in particular, you are quickly disillusioned. The competition is so keen. Call at any of the children's agencies in New York, and you will find several individuals there ahead of you, eager to adopt, and patiently enduring the inspection and interviewing of the agency's officials. At the department in the municipal building is the same. They have on an average a dozen applications for adoption of children, every day. They have from Fifth avenue heiresses to colored dressmakers, so that, while you offer to relieve them of an infant charge, you are competing with a host of other persons. It will by no means create a sensation.

Furthermore, if your demand is for a boy, you are likely to be refused for the reason that the stock is exhausted. "I am sorry, but we haven't any just at present," the matron will sympathize. "I'm really sorry," but how about a nice little girl? You hadn't considered adopting a boy? Why, I thought most people preferred a girl. I've got a cunning little fellow only two months old—really quite a beauty in his way, abandoned by his mother. And so inspiring is the sudden enthusiasm of the matron for baby boys, and especially for this baby boy, that she will even offer to waive the price of the adoption, and after that there is little chance of your refusing him.

Didn't Want Charlie

But, after you have departed the matron will likely send her assistant and say, "Isn't it strange they all want girls? I thought I would never be able to persuade that couple to take little Charlie. They've been so made up about adopting a girl. They wanted one with the regulation blue eyes and infantile suggestion." The matron will then say, "I'm sure he will be brown and he has such a quaint little turned-up nose." This preference for girls is rather surprising in view of the world's general partiality toward boys, and is one of the many inexplicable features of the adoption business. Another is the curious manner in which some children, and even infants, appear to attract different people, winning them for their parents in spite of their obvious liabilities. For instance, it is not at all unusual to have a couple visit an agency with a well-defined idea of just what they want in the way of a child. There is a widespread demand for curls, and to this may be added several other specifications such as a straight nose, well-set ears and long eyelashes. But almost without exception they end by adopting some little waif who does not fit the picture at all, but who has won them over by a few timid advances.

The matrons who have been engaged in this work for some time, but they never attempt to force certain children upon certain applicants, but leave it to the law of natural selection, which operates in the adoption business as well as in other romantic matters. Adopters Are Particular. "One time I was informed by a wealthy New York family that they wanted to adopt a little boy who had golden hair, blue eyes, and a straight, sturdy back," said a woman official of the City Children's Bureau. "The next morning, her eyes twinkling as she related her various experiences. 'He was to be anywhere from five to 10 years old, and I knew one little boy whose cherubic countenance answered the even more detailed description which came later, so I had him adopted in a new suit and sent up to the great lady's house.' 'I was immediately called on the telephone and showered with praise for my wise choice, so that I went about for the next few days feeling exceedingly pleased with myself for having started one little boy on the road to wealth. A week later the boy was returned as unsatisfactory. Again I was summoned to the phone, and this time a fearful voice asked me how I expected it to keep an uncouth little scoundrel who turned the hose on dear Pido, slid down the banisters, and threw his new Firewater collars out the window.

No More C. O. D. Orders. "After that I gave up sending C. O. D. orders. The same boy was later placed with a couple who were blessed with greater humor, and who permitted the child's normal personality to assert itself. They chose not because of his golden hair and scrawny smile, but because they liked him—a fact which the boy seemed to sense and appreciate.

Of course, the matter of coloring is pretty important to the prospective parents, you know. It is usually because they want to keep secret the fact that it is not their own, and so they want its coloring to be of the normal variety. It would never do for a couple without a blond hair or blue eye to have them to go to the sun and have a blond young offspring, if they wanted to convince their friends and relatives that it was their own. "Sometimes family pride is so carefully guarded in requests for infants, and we must hunt vigilantly about the various agencies until we find the one desired. I have seen requests for infants with moles on different parts of their anatomy, and one West Virginia woman wrote in for a baby who had a cowlick in her hair. She said, and so the new baby must have one. I didn't know what to do, but I got the letter, but I made it a point to investigate and eventually sent her a baby who showed signs of developing one."

Another difficult request which recently came to the City Children's office was from a couple of young, unmarried scholars, who wanted a pair of twins to adopt. They wanted infant girls, of course, and these being practically out of stock at present, the City Children's office was unable to fill the order.

Unless it is absolutely necessary, children belonging to the same family are never scattered to different parts of the nation, but are at least placed in the same town, if not in the same neighborhood. Children adopted as infants are not aware of the family tie, but the parents are. The adoption authorities are great believers in the integrity of life. The shade of Samuel Butler never haunts their careful administration, or casts a doubt upon the truth of their staunch policy. The place for a baby, anyway, is the home, they assert, and not in an institution. They call attention to the fact that human beings are born as individuals and not in herds, as are many other animals, and that consequently they do not thrive under such conditions. A baby needs a mother's love, as much as it needs a mother's milk, and the adoption authorities do not do a thing to be sentimental about it, either. If you are inclined to argue about it, they hand you innumerable statistics, proving that children die like flies in institutions and survive in the home. For instance:

Many Die in Institutions. "From 1909 to 1913, in New York state institutions for the care of orphans and foundlings, almost half of those under two years of age died—or out of every 1,000, in the same period, 490 died. The same number of children of that age in the state, only 87 out of 1,000 died."

But do you believe that even a baby needs a mother? A good inclination? A matron of one of the agencies was asked, "On the East Side there are some rather appalling things going on. Do you think that I have lived among the people on the East Side, and I know all about their homes, and yet I believe that in the majority of cases the average baby is better off with its mother than in one of those homes than in an institution." In view of this statement, it is good to reflect that the adoption business is achieving such tremendous proportions. Eventually, when the children are all disposed of, it may even be extended to include some of us who dwell in hotels, boarding houses, and kindred institutions.

pan with dirt, make the surface firm and smooth, then scatter your lettuce, spinach, radish or beet seeds over the top and sprinkle a little soil over them. Give them plenty of water daily and set the pan near the window where it will get heat and sunlight. Later on sow cabbage, tomatoes, cauliflower and cucumbers in the same manner. These seedlings can be planted in the garden when the weather permits when the frost is out of the ground, and will give you fresh vegetables about a month earlier. The outdoor planted seed come up.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY E. MOULTON

This ouija board business, this talking with the departed, is certain, we believe to have its disadvantages. While important as a discovery, it reveals the possibility of certain embarrassments to the party who is long-distanced from earth.

For instance, may we not cite a case which might easily happen to a man who has sought a good night on earth, has combated the high cost of living and the various vagaries of an academic tax system, and is finally given succor and vacation in a comfortable spot on the other side, such as a window seat in a club overlooking the golden street, is in our opinion entitled to a rest. On earth he has had a tough time.

But, as he sits looking out upon the throng and wondering why so many interesting people he thought would be there are not, a page summons him. "Your wife wants you on the ouija board," says the page. And sure enough, friend wife, back on earth, has put in a call.

He can't say that he's "out to lunch" in a conference, because lunch and conference are unknown in that locality. He can't say that he has gone to catch the 5:15, for the 5:15 is an institution in the underworld. He simply must answer. Then his wife will come at him with a lot of ouija board rumors concerning himself, and have come to her ears during recent ouija board orgies in friends' homes on earth. "Were you out walking with a blonde last evening?"

No, we believe a man is entitled to a little privacy along with his well-earned vacation.

We found the champ optimist of the universe yesterday. He was in a telephone booth trying to get "Spring 1920."

May we not mention that the skimmed-milk investigations in the forest products industry are being conducted by Prof. S. Butterman.

THE ROYS MADE SUCH LOVELY HUSBANDS, TOO. (Harrison Ark. Times.) Annie Burleson, who went west last fall, came back with a husband by name of Roy some time ago in an auto.

The coolest man in New York was awakened by a burglar. He got up and went downstairs, and as he entered the dining room, where the thieves were engaged in wrapping up silver plate, they covered him with their revolvers.

"Pardon me for disturbing you, gentlemen," he said, but I should like you to take care of my car. It is not much to ask, will you be so good as to post this letter for me? It must go tonight. It's the premium for my burglary insurance."

Boston is in dire straits. Several bean trains have been stalled in snow drifts and have been unable to reach the city.

Isn't it about time to put the war to bed and rock it to sleep? The silver dollar is still useful for the baby to cut its teeth on.

It is hoped that the new secretary of state, in running the affairs of his office, will be allowed to follow one of the president's pet theories of self-determination.

Kipling says there is money in poetry, but there is a good more poetry in money.

I know a very remarkable man. He saved enough during the year to pay his income tax.

ASK US

The Gazette maintains an information bureau at Washington, D. C., under the direction of Frederic J. Haskin. Questions will be answered on any subject. Those desiring information may write the Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclose a stamp. The letter will be answered by the nearest post.

Q. What is the salary of the president of the German republic? A. E. L. S.

Q. Frederick Ebert receives a salary of about $240,000 per year. This was a mighty increase from the humble pittance he received as a harness maker in Bremen, where he also had been employed as a tailor. Immediately preceding his election to the presidency he was editor of a newspaper, the "Burger Zeitung," published in Bremen. Mr. Ebert had been a member of the Reichstag in 1912, and in the following year was elected chairman of the social democratic party.

Q. Which is the greatest peanut growing state in this country? A. L. M.

A. Alabama is the leading state in peanut production with 6,840,000 bushels to her credit in 1919, while five other states produced from 3,400,000 to 4,000,000 bushels each. The production of peanuts in the United States last year was 33,263,000 bushels, having a cash value of $80,000,000. The winter average price paid for peanuts was $2.40 per bushel.

Q. Are men in the military service still allowed to own a dog? A. E. D.

A. Since the railroads have been returned to the private owners, the one-cent mileage for service men on foot is still in effect.

Q. How much money did Great Britain lend to her allies during the war? A. W. R.

A. $5,500,000,000 is owing from Europe to Great Britain on loans made during the war. Her heavy loans included British loans to Russia, France, Italy, Belgium, and Serbia. Russia alone owes about $2,500,000,000. England herself borrowed $1,000,000,000 from the United States to meet her war debts.

Q. How much weight will a dirigible carry with a capacity of 30,000 cubic feet of gas? A. D. V. H.

A. It will carry 3,250 pounds. The landing of a dirigible is sometimes a difficult undertaking. It depends entirely upon conditions as to the amount of gas that must be let out to escape in order to make a safe landing. Some landings are made without allowing any gas to escape, while as much as 2,000 cubic feet of gas is sometimes let out to effect a landing.

Q. What is the percentage of Catholics in Germany, and Italy? A. J. A.

A. In Germany 36.1 of the entire population are Catholics, while in Italy the percentage is 95.13. When was the wheel first invented? E. V. S.

A. The use of the wheel goes back to the dark ages. The first wheels were made of solid blocks of wood cut from the trunks of trees. Many changes were made before the modern wheel was evolved.

Why Measles May Be Dangerous

This is No. 3 of a series of advertisements, prepared by a competent physician, explaining how certain diseases which attack children, such as Measles, whooping cough, even a long continued cold—often leave these organs in an inflamed, congested state, thus affording a favorable foothold for invading germs. And how Vick's Vapo-Rub may be of value in this condition.

few of us escape measles—it is one of the commonest of childhood diseases. Every mother knows the symptoms, but the mistake that most mothers make is in failing to realize that the child is not fully recovered after the eruption and fever disappear. The air passages are still inflamed and if this inflammation is not cleared up, the air passages may be weakened, this paving the way for pneumonia or serious disease of the lungs.

Nightly applications of Vick's Vapo-Rub will aid nature in believing this inflammation. Because Vick's acts locally by stimulation thru the skin to draw out the inflammation, attract the blood away from the congested spots and relieve the cough. In addition, the medicinal ingredients of Vick's are vaporized by the body heat. These vapors are breathed in the lungs.

Samples to new users will be sent free on request to the Vick Chemical Company, 233 Broad Street, Greensboro, N. C.

HER FEELINGS THE DAY AFTER

Jack proposed last night; no, this morning. For after all the dear boy has only been gone two hours and it was at midnight when he told me the sweetest thing that a girl can hear, and here have I been dreaming in this little room of nine since he kissed me the last time. I wish that the world could have seen his face, when he left—it was so radiant, so triumphant.

Here in this room and in this diary of mine, I can dare to tell the truth, fortunately, for my own sake. Consequently I can confess to having treated Jack a bit shabbily all these weeks. Maybe that's why I decided to do the decent thing and accept when he proposed to me. But oh, dear me, he is so good! That's what provokes me to do with him at times, honor bright. And the world is forever harping on the fact that pure and noble women fall in love with good men. If that is the case, why did I, of all people, fall so desperately in love with "Brisby" Martin last year? And why did I turn back and cold, and now, when I pass him on the street, and he looks through to the back of my soul, with those wicked brown eyes of his? Oh, dear me, the use of trying to understand oneself after all!

I never can understand myself. Brisby must be a good incident in my young life. I am sure that I am the fiancée of Jack Edmonds, and the sooner he and I realize that fact, the better for all concerned. Dear, dear! The truth of the matter is that I feel like flirting forever with every man I know. Horrors! If the world could hear that truth!

Dear little Jansville, to my most conventional friends—"She's so timid about trying her wings, the sweet child, and yet somehow or other I'm just as pleased that she should be this way. Girls in these days get into so many nicksups through their lack of discretion and experience. So are just as glad that our ladies have their cool sure head on their shoulders that she has."

If she only knew of some of the un-sure things that I have been guilty of. Still, I always have been really harmless, though the casual outsider perhaps has thought otherwise. I have never been a girl who feels about things sometimes. I never could see the harm in going to the studios of Dorry and Jean. We were all at school.

Have always held that to have friends we must first prove ourselves friendly. I love company and fun, hence I have always wanted real friends and have tried to do all in my power to please and bring happiness to any one whenever I could. I have given the best of myself over and over again. I have gone more than half way, many times, to make friends. I am always cheerful when among people, as I think, maybe they also have troubles of their own. I have been willing to overlook many little thoughtless acts of unkindness from people whom I have shown only kindness and good will.

Am I asking too much of people? It strikes me that the loyal brand of friendship is going out of date. I have been deceived so many times by people on whom I have placed my trust, that I have lost faith. I have made up my mind henceforth to think of my own pleasures first regardless of any one else. I am not sure of the quality of compensation from such a source, but I am only human and I am not human to turn the other cheek everlastingly.

FORTUNA. The world has changed so rapidly in the past 25 years that the function of friendship seems to have changed too. People are pulled in all directions and too busy to give as much time to their friends as formerly. Their regard for each other may be as deep, but the expression less frequent.

You have chosen your friends unwisely since they have proven so faithless to you. Do not hang on to people too tightly. Their numerous activities make a binding friendship a strain and they want to break it close by. If you go your way and let your friends go theirs they will enjoy a relationship with you. Work hard, attend lectures and read. This will keep you interested and make you more interesting. And if you yourself too busy to want to spend much time with any one person.

There is a strong element of respect in friendship. If you let people walk over you they will not care as much for you and will turn their admiration in another direction. It is pitiful that you have lost your faith in life. Your plan to think of your own happiness first seems to me to be a wise decision. Since you have chosen for in the other direction, a little selfishness will give you balance.

There are just as many honorable and loyal people in the world. Dear Mrs. Thompson: My parents have moved away from here and my brother and I have decided to furnish some rooms and do light house-keeping. Would it be proper for my fiancée to stay with us, too? He is all alone here, but his sister intends to come here soon and would like to stay with me. Should we wait until then? We do not intend to be married for a year and I would not like to do anything that is not conventional.

THANK YOU. You and your brother should find some one else to live with you. It would not be conventional or wise for your fiancée to make his home with you even if his sister does come. Mary now if you expect to do this.

HATS WITH BRIMS WILL TAKE PLACE OF SMALL TURBANS FOR LATE SUMMER WEAR

By ELOISE. Turbans will not swing the pendulum of fashion this season. Even now when they are popular for street wear and afternoon wear they are not the dominant fashion of the hour. Although the small hat always has a place and appears to possess the power to remain fashionable in all seasons the hat with a brim of some kind will surely lead all others when real summer arrives. Just now hats with brims are having great vogue at the southern colonies.

It is said by critics that no woman over 35 should wear a hat without a brim, as the eyes need shading and the thinness of the temples need fattening. Although that may be sound advice based on reason and artistic perception, most women act otherwise. As soon as women reach the questionable age they begin to think of turbans, which more often than not make the face look hard and unkind. This is perhaps the reason that youth has so little to do with the turban. It has felt that the turban was the undisputed property of age. Youthful faces which need no softening are usually shaded with a brim, but this year fashion favors brims on hats for young and old alike.

The brims of this spring have no set rule of conduct. They may tilt downward at back and front, up-lifting at sides, or they may be scooped in from the forehead and back and tilted so far downward at the sides that they suggest the poke bonnet. They are two inches or six inches wide, they may be stiff and rigid or soft and pliable. They are like pieces of art. All of which is significant of the fact that a woman may please herself.

Here are two pretty styles which will be good for wear all through the summer season. The one above is fashioned of tan straw fabric trimmed with old rose. The old rose binds the brim and forms a band about the crown and embroidery in the same shade trims the crown. The other hat is a smart little sailor shape with a turned up brim. It is henna and the facing taupe. A band of the two colors of straw is braided about the crown.

Water over all and let bake real fast for half an hour. "Surprise Salad"—A quarter of a small head of lettuce for each person, sections of grapefruit cut in quarters and small pieces of Spanish onion, covered with mayonnaise. Chop a dash of paprika and narrow strips of green pepper or pimento laid across the top.

Orange may be used in place of grapefruit. American Coffee Cake—Put in large kettle one cup sugar, one tablespoon salt, one beaten egg, one cup milk, one cup warm water or milk and one large tablespoon melted shortening. Then add one cake compressed yeast which has been dissolved in one cup warm water with one teaspoon sugar. Add enough flour to make stiff dough, but do not knead.

Let rise good, put into three or four greased tins, spread with mixture of three-quarters cup sugar, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon butter and some cinnamon, all creamed together. Let rise again and bake in slow oven. Plain Cake—One cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, Cream butter and sugar together. Two eggs (whites and yolks beaten separately), one-half cup sweet milk, one teaspoon extract, one and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder. Add the well beaten whites of eggs last, beat for 10 minutes, bake in two layers. Maple Nut Cake—Cream one-third cup of shortening and one cup of light brown sugar, add yolks of two eggs and one cup of milk and beat well. Sift one and one-half cups of flour, one-quarter teaspoon salt and two teaspoons baking powder together and then add the first mixture. Fold in the beaten whites of the eggs, add last one teaspoon of vanilla or maple flavoring and bake all used up, then pour milk and

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A PLAIN BABY—12

Two Miles of Oxygen

Remember all the trouble they had with the commissary department when the kid next door arrived? I told about it Chapter 8. Well, that kid beats me more in my diary. I find. Here is my entry for a perfect day: October 20, Sunday.—RAW, cold north wind. Funny thing happened. Mollyscoutie kid next door whooping it up when we went for a walk this morning. Her mother told my mother she dared not take the poor thing out on such a day, for fear she might take cold—and she said it in a sort of chiding tone. Mother smiled and made no rejoinder. Later her mother told me that dad, and he said Mrs. Camp must have been calling on the neighbors. Too bad, too bad, said, as he got ready to roll on the floor with me. Too bad that folks get so "sol" in their errors.

They are pretty thoroughly sold on "taking cold" and are really afraid. I look on mother and dad as a little dotty for "exposing" me, as they call it, to all kinds of weather. They consider it remarkably lucky that I have not "taken my death of cold" on some of the blustery days I've been out for my regular two miles of oxygen. Father says that's why he wants me to get my oxygen every day, regardless of weather—oxygen is always lucky for a baby.

The amusing part of it all is that the poor little thing next door is getting to be very susceptible. Her life is just one respiratory infection after another. I heard her mother say "colds" he'd burn my manuscript up! As for me, somehow in spite of the cruelty of my parents in taking me out in all kinds of weather, it remains yet to encounter my first respiratory infection.

The parents of the kid next door assume that the more susceptible a child is to "exposure," as they insist on calling the good old open air, the more careful they must be about letting the child have an airing.

In well greased loaf pan in moderate oven from 35 to 45 minutes. Cover top with maple icing and sprinkle with one cup of chopped nuts (preferably pecans) while still soft. Use following recipe for maple icing: Maple Icing: Add one-half cup of butter to one-half cup of sugar, add slowly one and one-half cups (about) confectioner's sugar, to make paste of the right consistency to spread. Add one-half teaspoon maple flavoring and spread on top and sides of cake.

Bean Salad—Take some left-over baked beans, add to them several finely diced pickles, a few olives, just a little onion and some diced celery. Mix together with favorite mayonnaise, arrange on platter with pickles with thin slices of pickle and serve.

DISCOVERIES

To Prepare Gingham and calico so they won't fade no matter if material is cheap: One half of soft water (cold), one handful of table salt, one tablespoon turpentine. Mix all together, then put material in till well soaked. Hang on line till nearly dry, then iron with, not too hot an iron. The ironing helps to set the color.

To Remove Yellow Stains on Sink or Bathtub—Pure cider vinegar or lemon juice applied to places with cloth, then scour in usual manner and rinse thoroughly.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

America and American women especially are having an unusually good opportunity this year to meet the great women of other lands, and exchange ideas with them. The women physicians of the world convened in New York recently, and the women who represent labor met not very long ago in Washington. It is a great treat to get the views of the leaders of the foreign women and to see their political leaders. This is one reason why every American woman is interested in Mrs. Marie Hjelmer, who occupies a seat in the upper house of Riksdag of Denmark.

return with the commission. Miss Friedman has had wide experience in industrial work as industrial secretary for the Y. W. C. A. during the war, supervising the association work in munition and other factories. She was secretary for the International Congress of Working Women which was held last fall in Washington. There has been an enormous increase of women in industry in China and Japan within the last few years, the social adjustment has not kept pace with it, and the two countries are interested to obtain the result of western experience in regard to the welfare of women workers. The commission will meet in Shanghai in January to discuss findings up to that time. The mission board hopes to fill the needs of the workers who come within their scope.

Mrs. Hjelmer has been in this country as adviser to the Danish delegation to the recent industrial conference of the League of Nations. For several years she has been a member of the municipal council of her small city. Last year she was elected to the Landsting, which is the upper house of the Riksdag. Mrs. Hjelmer, president of the Danish Women's Suffrage association, was at the same election, seated in the lower house, the Folketing. Both women have recently been instrumental in leading to victory a woman's equal pay bill.

TO HELP ORIENTAL WOMEN

Leading and prominent women are members of a commission which sails soon to China and Japan under the auspices of the Women's Federation of Mission Boards to study economic, educational and religious conditions in those countries, specializing on those relating to women and children. Those to sail are President M. Carey Thomas of Bryn Mawr, President Ellen F. Pendleton of Wellesley, Miss Charlotte Conant of the Woman's Hill School for Girls, Miss Ernestine Friedman of the Young Women's Christian association, and Miss Amelia Josephine Burr. ## STRONG DEFENSE HOLDS LAKOTAS

Hard Luck In Shooting Experienced by Cardinals—Game Cleanest of Series.

The next game of the Cardinal-Fairies series will be played at the college gymnasium tomorrow night at 8:15. Both teams are on edge to take the victory. If the Cardinals win, it will be the final contest of the series, which now stand three to two in favor of Janesville. Should Beloit take the long end of the score, the rubber will be played off in the line city Thursday night.

(BY FRANK SINGLAI)
Something was radically wrong in the city of Beloit Saturday night and that something was the playing of the Lakota Cardinals. They lost to the Beloit Fairies 14-11.

The Gateway city team set up a four-man defense on Lakota territory that was well high impossible to break through. In fact only twice during the game did the Cards score field goals. So well did Woods hang on to Young, who was playing running guard for Janesville, that the fast artist from the north failed to make a basket. Eddie Karst, too, was out of the scoring, although he took several long, failing chances.

George Lewis, coach of Madison high school, third place winners in the state high school tournament, will positively play with the Lakota Cardinals against the Beloit Fairies at Beloit in the sixth game of the inter-city basketball series tomorrow night. He assured the managers of the Cardinals and the sporting editor of the Gazette over the phone today that he would be on hand.

Fairies' Defense
The defense of the Fairies was the best they have done against the Cardinals this year. They were as solid as a stone wall and as soon as they broke up the Cardinal attacks, the ball would be advanced down the field in clock-like work. That the made only five field baskets, two of them by Phillips, was due to the interference of the Lakota players.

Before the smallest house of the series, only 700 being present because many people could not get away from their shops. The game, the game was interesting in the first half. The Cards had struck their stride. But when Phillips made his ordinary would have been the try of a crazy man from beyond the center of the court, the Fairies scored and took the lead.

For the balance of the half the ball was mostly in Cardinal territory. Long passing, however, was broken by the Fairies and on one such attempt Phillips scored again. Dufford was taken out, and Pinfeld went in. Dunn fouled his old enemy, Zabel, and the count went to 14-9.

A foul on Woods, caged by Young, counter-balanced the point. With two minutes to go, Phillips fouled and Young with his eagle eye shot the score to 14-11, where it stood when the gun flashed the closing note.

For the first time of the game, the Janesville fans showed real enthusiasm, shouting to raise the rafters. ### THE MILITARIST

There's a little crooked street,
Where the taxis gabble frown,
And you hear the clacking feet
Shod in wood go up and down.
There's a little winding way,
Climbing upward through the trees,
Where the purple end of day
Comes so gently on the breeze!

And I wish that I could go there
To little maid I know there
When the lilacs bloom that grow
There,
But it's far across the seas!

There's a ribbon of a lane,
Checked and furrowed on either hand,
Poppies laughing in the grain,
Springtime singing in the land.
And the lane leads straight and true
To a welcome open door,
And with love for half a score.

And my heart would cease to fret
There,
And I'd find the maid I met there,
But I fear I'll never get there,
Till they have another war!

All the military strategy in Prussia, says ex-Sergeant SOL, doesn't seem to be able to stop old General Strike.

My sweet revenge was turned to gall

BIRCH TO REFEREE TITLE COLLEGE GAME; MADE HISTORY HERE

Chicago, March 22.—Frank Birch, one of the best known football and basketball officials in the western conference, Saturday night was chosen to referee the first game of the national intercollegiate basketball championship series between the University of Chicago and the University of Pennsylvania teams here tonight.

Birch is well known to Janesville sportsmen and also the business men of this city. He was at one time the C. A. in which capacity he trained many of the young fellows who later took a big part in the city's sporting history. It was largely through Birch's efforts that basketball got on its feet here. Many of the men who have played with the Lakota Cardinals got their first knowledge of basketball through him.

For many years he has traveled for the Janesville Barb Wire Co. (now the Pence & Post Co.) and is still its representative.
